Jim - I do not think I can make Monday, even if the Fed Gov does not shut down...and until we know what happens there, I hesitate to suggest an alternate date/time.

Also, you had asked about the basis for an RfD for manganese of 0.05 rather than 0.14. I am told IRIS explains the modifying factor of 3 when assessing exposure to manganese from drinking water or soil. To that end, 0.05 is used in the EPA Drinking Water Health Advisory for Manganese. I have been discussing manganese with EPA HQ and, in addition to some other issues, the question of how organoleptic criteria should be handled is being discussed.

- Bill
